TODAY'S THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving is a day set aside by the government as a national holiday but also a day designated by the church as a time of special devotion. Thanks to God for the many gifts he has bestowed upon us.

As a national holiday this can be regarded only as a public ceremony. It is a vacation from everyday duties, a time when we are given an excellent opportunity to see some outstanding athletic team struggle for a victory on the gridiron, or a day for a real feast.

We are prone to think of Thanksgiving too much in this light and not enough in the spirit in which it was instituted by the Pilgrims who first celebrated this holy day consecrated to God's service. During the hardships suffered throughout the year, they felt that thanks and praise were due their Creator who had protected them on their journey to a new country, who had sent them successful harvests, and who had given strength in body and soul to the small number left to carry on the work of the colony.

It is not enough to be thankful because we feel much more today. Have we not advantages undreamt of in colonial days? Visible assets as money, fame, success, or honor do not make an appreciative person. It is the knowledge that he possesses the gift of life with all its blessings and benefits that makes a person really observe Thanksgiving Day in a spirit of gratitude and thankfulness. We must ever be aware that it is only through God's love, mercy, and kindness that we can enjoy that gift of life. Let us always remember not to be more grateful for the holiday than we are for its cause. With that realization we can preserve the spirit of Thanksgiving and give sincere thanks to the "Giver of all good gifts."

WE EXPRESS OUR SYMPATHY

The Trumpet with the entire college wish to express their sympathy to Miss Mathilda Bodensack upon the death of her mother, Mrs. Julius Bodensack of Columbus, Ohio, which occurred Monday evening, Nov. 9. Mrs. Bodensack was formerly of Charles City, Iowa, where she was known as Miss Summers.

Mathilda Bodensack is a freshman at Wartburg college and holds the position of assistant news editor of this paper.

A PRESSING PROBLEM

Wartburg is vitally interested in its students' health; the administration shows this by hiring a student nurse and by requiring physical examinations and physical training.

But the administration is entirely overlooking the fact that health can only be preserved by proper food. We realize that the financial situation is acute, but why should the "pay as you go" plan be adopted by the board of trustees? Four dollars a week is not an exorbitant charge, but it is enough so that students have a right to expect plenty of good food. This year there have been few second servings and sometimes the lunch tray do not receive enough to serve all.

Athletes can hardly sustain life on a diet of cake. Even the ordinary demands of college life require more food, especially when green vegetables and fruits.

The boarding club as it is now run does not in any way cater to student tastes. Perhaps students do not understand all of the factors involved, but they would have the opportunity to assist in improving the college boarding club.

Therefore we propose the following plan: let one student be chosen by each of the three dorms to serve with a faculty representative as a governing board of the dining hall. Students would thus be allowed to act constructively rather than expressing discontent by unconsciously slandering rumors and by continual grumbling.

ARMISTICE TALK
GIVEN BY AARDAL

Thrills of War Cannot Justify
Sorrow and Losses
They Entail.

"I don't believe it settled a thing. We wanted to tear down war machines and we didn't get it," was what Prof. A. Aardal told the Wartburg faculty at an address on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, in which he reviewed some of the activities of the World War in which he participated.

After concluding his address, Aardal spoke of the necessity of peace and going through the necessary process. Professor Aardal was greeted by the Wartburg faculty and the Wartburg students, D. C. where the legion was being formed in regard to the second camp he said, "We didn't know what war was like, we only knew the training didn't seem to be any. The training was carried on in New York where we were educated, we were sent over."

We landed in a first French camp. Sanitary conditions were such that more men were lost here than any other camp. From there we were shipped in box cars to a position close to the North Sea where we were attached to the British for training. In working with the British the Americans were given some experience with gas warfare. Professor Aardal described some of the things that he saw and gave an account of one of the greatest gas attacks of the entire war.

"Our work was generally carried on from nine to two o'clock in the morning in order to prevent being sighted by the enemy. The maximum range of the gas was 300 yards, so we had to work quite close to the line. We used 80 tons of poisonous fluid in that great shock, which was made March, 1918. The signal for shooting the bombs was to be a green flag. It was very hard to get a second difference could be noted. The noise was so great that I wonder that all of us didn't become deaf."

After fighting with the English troops, the company went to the American headquarters where they received more gas training. That the war necessary is shown by the fact that, costing time and money, the war was not a second difference could be noted. The noise was so great that I wonder that all of us didn't become deaf."

about a month, Professor Aardal was in the American lines in the Battle of Verdun. He was among the first to advance. In describing the conditions, he said, "We had mud up to our knees. All of the roads had to be blasted in order that the soldiers who followed could march."

In regard to our present condition, Professor Aardal told the student body, "We don't want to be labeled as militaristic, but we should be in military defense. We should keep out of entanglements with other nations. Let us work for those ideals."

Preceding the address "Armistice Day" was played by the pep band.

Hitler Initiates
Educational Drive

Dr. J. Hitler of the Wartburg faculty used Arminius Weyers' quotation, "Every man has his fault" as the subject of his talk at Waverly high school last Monday morning, Nov. 9.

The address given to the assembled members of the junior and senior high school, commended the spirit of Nelson's Education Week.

"The people cannot create something out of nothing," Dr. Hitler asserted. "Each person has his own particular 'forte' or talent. The spirit of the students must have some ability to be developed or their training is a waste of time. The school must do its best and the pupil must show himself into the job of developing his particular talent," he concluded.

OUR CHRISTIAN RELIGION CAN CORRECT EVILS

Gwynne and Olson
Staunch Advocates
to Stop Crime.

"That the Christian religion is the greatest single factor which will make this a better world" was the idea brought out in the address given by Congressman John W. Gwynne of Iowa, Tuesday last.

In "New York a survey of 2,000 people who had been arrested disclosed that 73 per cent had no connection whatsoever with any religion. If we wish to cut the crime bill in America, everything possible should be done to extend the influence of Christian religion."

Congressman Gwynne, who was recently elected to his position, concluded with a plea that future generations would avoid any course which might again lead us into a European war.

On election day, Tuesday, Nov. 3, Professor Osterberg of the history department presided at a timely topic. He reviewed the various elections in the history of our country which were distinguished by some peculiar features.

In the case of the first election under our constitution, Professor Osterberg said, "That was very different from the election today. The people had nothing to do directly with the election. The state legislature chose the electors who cast their votes for two men; the one electing the majority became president."

Other interesting elections were those of 1800, the tie which was the cause for one of our early constitutional amendments, and the election of 1824.

The most peculiar, Mr. Osterberg refused to admit himself as to the result of this year's election.

Rev. Norman Hays addressed the student body Wednesday, Nov. 4, and drew attention to the uncertainties of our religious life.

"Most of us are bent to do something religious," the speaker asserted, "but we lack the determination to act upon our convictions."

house. There is no connection between knowing to do right and doing right. There are many who know the prediction of man and behavior of rats."

Reverend Hays, an ordained minister, is doing special work at Waverly. He plans to enter a graduate school next year.

"On the subject of Rev. H. A. Dora of the subject of Rev. H. A. Dora Monday, Nov. 3. The ideal of behavior best physically, mentally and spiritually was presented by the speaker."

"The soul which is a body and let us do the thing which will give us the most of the mountain top. If we want to be a mountain, let us be a mountain. It is a most important authority, it is a most important authority, it is a most important authority, it is a most important authority."

"The road which leads to the mountain top is the Bible. It shines from this book in its great love for fallen man. Let us develop a character which resembles a mountain rather than a swamp," the speaker exhorted us.

The fourth speaker of November 9, Rev. Roy Olson, a former pastor of the church at Minneapolis, Minn., spoke during the convention. He said, "The Christian life is a life in the words of the speaker were: 'I like to think of a man who is a Christian and uses the Christian life himself for the benefit of others. It is no more a matter of a challenge to red blood. Try being a Christian and you will see the difference and thrill.'

Prof. A. W. Schenck outlined the purpose and aims of the Lutheran Student Association of America on Tuesday, Nov. 3. It was to send four representatives of Waverly to the forthcoming meeting of the association in November 13 to 18 at La Crosse, Wis. An invitation to meet at the university next year will be extended to the association.

Reflections of Any Roommate's Early Arising

Why didn't she pick up those things? That's the first thing I stepped on them first thing. "How Not to Be a First Day?" That's what I ought to be writing.

Be-... Windows and raindrops both open. What a gas! Next year I'm going to reserve a nice cozy room at the North Pole, only it will be the North Pole. All this cold, the ice, the snow, the wind every night and you can close it every morning. And now the work even turn over, and here it is 7:15.

Well, wait a minute, my shippers, I believed in the work for your role. Maybe next time you'll put it where it belongs. Now you did it. I know it would happen that would work just what I want to do, you'll see. At least not if you're a dirty little piece of 190 or so.

or, well, what's lowest rack between people. Only you'd better pick up the pieces. Yes, and that's not enough, now show going to make me talk. "Good morning!"

Good morning! Did you sleep well?
